

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter, researcher present the conclusion and tried to give suggestions based on the result in this research.

A. Conclusion

In this research, researcher implemented scenario in teaching reading narrative text using a scientific approach with a cooperative script model. Even though at the first meeting students were passive in learning activities, after implemented the scientific approach with cooperative script model, students were increased their self-confidence in learning activity, students were able to improve reading skills and students were able to express their opinions.

In addition, the students' responses of scientific approach with cooperative script model are students felt happy and good attention in learning activities. This is can be seen in the development of students in learning activeness at the next meeting and the results of the questionnaire that were given to students. The result of questionnaire used a Likert scale as the calculated and showed most students agreed on teaching reading narrative text using the scientific approach with cooperative script model.

Moreover, students have difficulties in learning reading narrative text. The difficulties of students in reading narrative text are limited vocabulary, incorrect pronunciation and reading text understanding.

B. Suggestions

Based on the conclusions above, the researcher provides several suggestions to students, English teachers and future researchers.

1. Students

With the approach and learning model used by researcher in 3 meetings, the researcher hopes that students understand more about reading. Researchers suggest that students practice reading more, memorize vocabulary, increase confidence, pay attention to teachers, be serious in learning and enthusiasm for learning.

2. English Teacher

For English teachers. Based on this research, the researcher gave some suggestions to the English teacher to choose a learning method that was in accordance with the material to be conveyed, because not all learning methods could apply to all subjects. In addition, teachers must make students to become more confidence during the learning process.

3. Future Researchers

For future researchers. Researcher provides suggestions to future researchers to conduct interview with English teachers before making research to see characteristic of students. Future researchers must choose the appropriate learning method. So, students are able to understand the material and enjoy in learning activities.
